BEEF BATTLE

A very interesting experiment in breeding crossbred cattle has for some little time been carried on at the Marsh Brook House farm, in South Shropshire, England, says London Live Stock Journal, by Mr. Frederick N. Hill. There are at present among the breeding herd dairy Shorthorn cows, Hereford, Galloway and Jersey. Hereford and Shorthorn bulls have been used with the object of breeding early maturity cattle. Bulls were sold this last spring when 22 months old at £18 each. These were by a Hereford bull from Shorthorn cows, and taking everything into consideration—that is to say, constitution, aptitude to lay on flesh in the quickest time, together with prime quality of meat with the least offal—the cattle bred in this way most undoubtedly surpass the other crosses of pure breeds. The produce of Hereford sires and Shorthorn dams almost invariably come with mottled faces and red bodies—in fact, Hereford markings, with red spots on the white face. There is no class of cattle which the butchers are more fond of, either as "baby" beef or as matured bullocks. The produce of a Shorthorn bull on the Hereford dam appears to be rather larger in the earlier stages of growth but do not mature quite as rapidly and take rather more food to attain the same results. The Shorthorn dam, being the better milker, does the young calf more justice, but when she in turn has to be fattened off there is an additional expense owing to her not carrying the same flesh when suckling the calf and in taking a longer time to feed fat than the Hereford.

On moderate pastures it is found that the Hereford is the most economical breeding machine. If a Hereford cow of good quality and breeding has access to a good supply of running water, she will keep her condition and, indeed, feed herself fat and suckle her calf at the same time. The Shorthorn cow will probably rear another calf besides her own, and will get quite thin in the doing of it. It is a great question whether there is any real practical economy in this method of breeding, as although the Shorthorn data mated with the Hereford, as before stated, produces the best of meat paying stock, it is most difficult to buy calves of sufficiently good beef bearing qualities to rear on the cow in addition to her own. If the calf can take all the milk, and after the first few weeks this is generally the case, the extra allowance of new milk forces on the calf and pays in quickly bringing to early ripeness an animal which gives the best return for the food it consumes. Until the calf can take all the milk, the surplus which the cow gives may be utilized in many ways, either in helping the calves whose dams are poor milkers or being made use of for household purposes.

THE GOAT HERD

Angora goats are by no means new things. I became well acquainted with them when, for a time in West Virginia over 30 years ago, there was such an interest evoked in regard to them as there is just now, says Henry Stewart in American Sheep Breeder. A friend of mine had a flock of them which he employed in clearing some land of sprouts which had grown up in an clearing on a farm he had purchased. They did the business thoroughly, killed all the brush and left no work to be done the next year but to burn off the trash. Of such work as this I estimate a full grown goat will easily earn $20 as the equivalent in killing sprouts and small brush done by one man. As to the forming of a market for the mohair, experience may furnish a hint of value. Markets are made. Products never make a market for themselves. The demand must be made at the start. There is a place for the goat surely. It is the business of the breeders to find the place and fill it.

Angoras in California.

On my ranch in Sonoma county, Cal. I have a herd of 750 high bred Angora goats, many of which are eligible to registration, says J. C. Hobson in American Sheep Breeder. The Angora thrives extremely well in California, producing a fine, lustrous fleece of very fine staple. California ranks second among the great goat states in the production of the Angora goats, having, according to the government report, about 50,000 head, and being second only to Texas. In this state the consumption of Angora venison, as goat flesh is called owing to its rich, gamey flavor, derived from its browsing habits, which impart to the flesh a venison flavor, is becoming an item of very great magnitude. Many meat markets handle the carcass of the Angora in large quantities. As an exterminator of brush and weeds the Angora is unequalled by any other animal. If confined to small brushy pastures, the goats will within a short time kill all the woody growth by their constant browsing of the leaves and tender shoots of the brush and by girdling the trees of tender bark. While this process of redeeming the land is going forward they improve the fertility of the soil by evenly spreading over its surface their deposits of rich manure, thus accomplishing the double purpose of clearing the land and fertilizing it.

RYEBURG.

Dr. S. C. Gordon was in town last Friday.
Our doctors are very busy in and out of town.

T. L. Eastman and wife are on a trip to New York and Chicago.
Our Red Men go to Conway one night this week to work the Chief's degree. May their tribe increase.

The fair at East Conway last week held by the Good Templars was a success, about $80 being realized.
S. W. Rife & Son have just issued their seed catalogue, a nicely gotten up book containing much valuable information for seed growers and recipes for cooking.

The lecture course closes Thursday evening, Feb. 27, with a concert by the Boston Concert Co. Those who have not taken advantage of this course, have missed a rare treat.

The ringing of the fire bell last Thursday evening broke up the meeting of the Red Men and called out many of our citizens, to find the fire was coming from one of Mrs. Randall's chimneys. No damage done excepting to James Lovis who was censured with very emphatic language for giving the alarm so hastily.

Rev. Silas Adams of Westbrook preached at the Congregational church last Sunday, to the general satisfaction of the congregation. The electric lights were turned on in the vestry in the evening for the first time. The room was well filled with an attentive audience who listened to one of the most interesting and inspiring sermons that we have heard for many a week.

A. F. Lewis esq., has just completed and placed on the market his book, containing a full account of the proceedings at the Webster Centennial, Jan. 1, also a list of the distinguished graduates of the Academy and the preceptors from 1792 to the present date. The book will be found of great interest to all who are in any way connected with or interested in the Academy or the town, as a long list of historical events is given, dating back to 1684.

GRAFTON.

O. B. Dodge, who is at Cuspsight the most of the year, is calling on friends in town.

Mr. Hawkins, foreman for the Blanchard, Twitcomb Co., has been in town buying hay and potatoes. We understand that the price paid for potatoes was 50 cents.

Mrs. Betsey Bartlett who lives in this town with her son, J. W. Bartlett, has a cook-stove that has been in constant use in her own and her mother's family, over 40 years. Mr. Bartlett thinks he will soon purchase a modern range.

Clara Godwin of T. P. O. was at Geo. Otis' recently and stayed several hours. This is the first time in seven years that Miss Godwin has been so far, only as she was carried twice on a bed to the hospital. Her friends are numerous, and are more than glad to see her recovery. Her sister, Mrs. Minnie Abbott, who was her constant attendant during her illness has gone to Rumford Falls to work for Mrs. J. W. Brown.

Great Earthworms.

The earthworms of the island of Madagascar are specially remarkable. Of the smaller species Pontoscolex corethaurus and Perichocha biserialis occur the most frequently. A truly gigantic species was discovered by me in 1886 (Kynotus darwini). I possess several specimens of the thickness of the finger and a yard and a half in length. In the formation of mold and preparation of the soil they take a pre-eminent share, for they make deep passages in the ground and thus contribute to the ailing and breaking up of the surface mold. These gigantic annelids, after the fashion of our earthworms at home, pass a mass of earth through their intestines to cast it up afterward on the surface. Masses of these lumps of excrement lie about in many places. When dry, they weigh on an average from 4 1/2 to 5 ounces, and some specimens attain the weight of from 6 to 6 1/2 ounces. The disturbance of soil must thus be very considerable, and it is calculated that these animals are able in the course of 50 years to supply to the surface a stratum three feet in thickness.—"Madagascar," by Professor G. Keller.

How to Get On.

"Don't you see?" said Bob. "He goes up to a house, rings the door bell, pokes a packet of medicine without a direction into the servant's hands and walks off."
"Servant takes it into the dining room. Master opens it and reads the label: 'Draft' to be taken at bedtime—pills as before—lootion as usual—the powder. From Sawyer's, late Nockemors—physicians' prescriptions carefully prepared," and all the rest of it.
"Shows it to his wife. She reads the label. It goes down to the servants. They read the label. Next day the boy calls. 'Very sorry—his mistake—immense business—great many parcels to deliver—Mr. Sawyer's compliments—late Nockemors.'
"The name gets known, and that's the thing, my boy, in the medical way. Bless your heart, old fellow, it's better than all the advertising in the world. We have got one four ounce bottle that's been to half the houses in Bristol and hasn't done yet."—Pickwick Papers.

BOWSER AND BOTANY

HE TAKES UP THE STUDY OF FLOWERS AND PLANTS.

The Matter Was Dropped Very Soon, However, Owing to a Lively Experience the Botanist Had While After Knowledge in the Suburb.

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

When Mr. Bowser reached home the other evening, he was so deeply interested in a book in his hand that he almost passed his own gate, and when Mrs. Bowser expressed her curiosity he absently explained:

"It is a book on botany, and I haven't been so interested for years."

During the dinner hour he consulted the book at intervals and seemed lost to his surroundings, and it was not until they had finished that he aroused himself and said:

"Mrs. Bowser, you know what mayweed is, of course? It is to be found along all the highways in the northern states."

"Yes, I know," she replied.

"What sort of a plant is it?"

"Why, it's mayweed."

"I should have answered the same way three hours ago, but I know better now. This little book on botany has been posting me up. Mrs. Bowser, mayweed is a composite plant, and the Latin name for it is Maruta cotula."

HE CAME UPON AN OLD WOMAN MENDING HER COW.

"Well, what of it?" she asked.

"What of it? Why, for the first time in your life you know what mayweed is. In future when you hear anybody talking about Maruta cotula you'll know they mean mayweed instead of cornmeal. You have been familiar with horse radish for years, but do you know what sort of a plant it is?"

"It's horse radish, of course."

"Ah! Mrs. Bowser let me inform you that horse radish is a plant of the genus nasturtium, having a root of pungent taste. It's a wonder the grocer hasn't tried to make you believe that string beans were horse radish. There is a common weed along the highways generally called horseweed. Do you know anything about it?"

"Why should I care to?" she asked.

"In order to add to your knowledge. Horseweed, as I take pleasure in informing you, is a composite plant of the species Erigeron canadense, and if you will impress it upon your memory you won't get it mixed up with peanut shucks or popcorn. Let me ask what you know about catnip."

"Are you going to take this thing up as a fad?"

"Woman, I have no fads, as you well know," he replied, with great dignity. "I simply desire to know all about things and add to my stock of knowledge. If you weren't as obstinate as a mule, you'd be glad to pick up this study with me. Catnip is a plant of strong scent and belongs to the species—"

"To the species cat?" she interrupted.

Mr. Bowser glared at her over his spectacles, and his face grew red as paint. The cat, which sat looking up at him and feeling anxious to hear all about catnip, hoped there would be no row, and there was none. Choking back his anger, he quietly observed:

"Very well, Mrs. Bowser. If you want to be a blockhead and an ignoramus, I have no objections. I am now going to walk out into the suburbs to study botany, and you can sit around home and make mud pies. If I should be late, you needn't sit up for me."

"If you'll wait until I can put my hat on, I'll go with you," she replied.

"But I don't want you. A woman who glories in the fact that she can't tell a burdock from a bullfrog would be no company for me."

Mr. Bowser had proceeded for half a mile before he struck a rich field. Then he came upon an old woman minding her cow on the commons, and as he called and held up to her gaze a late dandelion he kindly observed:

"My good woman, you probably know

Scrofula

What is commonly inherited is not scrofula but the scrofulous disposition.

This is generally and chiefly indicated by cutaneous eruptions; sometimes by paleness, nervousness and more or less general debility.

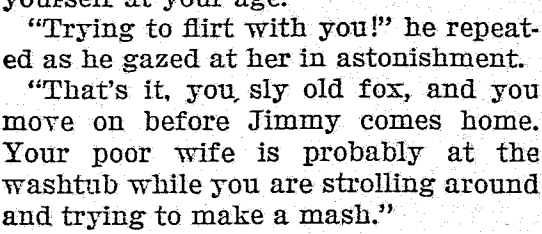

The disease afflicted Mrs. K. T. Snyder, Union St., Troy, Conn., when she was eighteen years old, manifesting itself by a bunch in her neck, which caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore.

It afflicted the daughter of Mrs. J. H. Jones, Parker City, Ind., when she was thirteen years old, and developed so rapidly that when she was eighteen she had eleven running sores on her neck and about her ears.

These sufferers were not benefited by professional treatment, but according to their own unsolicited statement, were completely cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

That positively corrects the scrofulous disposition and radically and permanently cures the disease.

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

DOWNY MILDEW.

A Serious Menace to Lima Beans. Conditions That Keep It Down.

Downy mildew is the most serious disease of the lima beans. It is met with in other states, and at the present time it is a serious menace to the growers of lima beans in New Jersey. From a bulletin on beans and their diseases just issued from the station of that state it appears that in some instances pole lima beans have been so badly attacked that few or no pods were picked.

The mildew was worse with plants growing upon rich lands and where the same crop had been upon the ground the previous year.

Not only the young pods, but the whole flower clusters, are destroyed, and the dead leaves of these stand up

"I presume you know this to be smartweed?"

"If I didn't, I'd be a fool," was the reply.

"Do you know what genus it belongs to?"

"Mebbe I do or I don't, but don't try any tricks on me."

"It is a plant of the genus polygonum, so called on account of its acrimony. My friend, you ought to be posted on what is growing at your own door."

"And what business is it of yours?" demanded the man as he bristled up.

"Say, now, you'd better move on. I've had four geese stolen, and if you think to get another you'll find yourself in the hospital."

The man looked so threatening that Mr. Bowser didn't stop for further argument. He wandered on till he came to a lane running up some sheds, and before him was a thistle as large as a bushel basket. He turned to the proper heading in his book and read to himself:

"One of the numerous prickly plants of the class syngenesia. The thistle is the national emblem of Scotland."

Mr. Bowser's face was wearing a complacent smile and he was feeling to pity Mrs. Bowser's ignorance on the thistle question when there was a sudden great racket in the sheds above.

He was hesitating between the racket and a specimen of the mullin, a plant of the genus verbasum, when a drove of about 40 hogs came rushing down the lane. Why they rushed was a mystery to him, but rush they did, and in his surprise he stood his ground until too late. The hogs seemed to be thoroughly alarmed and also to feel that they had the right of way, and as Mr. Bowser sprang for the fence at last a big black porker knocked the legs from under him. As he went down and rolled over about 20 of the hogs clung over him, and when the last had passed his book on botany was a wreck, his hat a pancake, and he was covered with dust from head to foot. Half an hour later he opened his own gate and passed in, leaving the crowd of boys who had followed the circus on the outside. Mrs. Bowser and the cat sat on the front steps. When they had made out what it was above the surrounding leaves of the affected plants. The general appearance of mildewed pods is shown in the cut, and a ruined plant tip also.

This mildew, a mildew of the grape, another of indoor lettuce, another of the onion and potato root fungus all belong to the same family.

It is believed that both insects (especially bees) and the prevailing winds play a great part in disseminating downy mildew of the lima bean. Also it is greatly influenced by moisture, as excessive summer and autumn rains.

Conclusions drawn from experiments show that even in a season most favorable for the lima bean mildew a thorough treatment of the vines with Bordeaux mixture will insure a crop. The selection of well drained land and a light soil, reducing the number of vines in the hill and planting the poles erect will insure conditions as little favorable to the development of the fungus as possible.

The late autumn growth of lima bean mildew is remarkable. It thrives on pods after the plants are killed by frosts.

WHEN FILLING THE SILO.

Ensilage Must Be Evenly Distributed if It Is to Keep Well.

"While the silo is being filled a man should be there all the time to keep the surface level and especially to pack the silage next to the walls, where the greatest friction occurs in setting," says an Orange Judd Farmer writer.

"If the silage be allowed to fall from the end of the carrier to the bottom of the silo, it will quickly form a conical heap, down the sides of which the heavier parts of the silage will roll, and thus a separation of the coarse and fine portions of the silage will be effected. This should be avoided."

"To overcome this objection and to facilitate the work in the silo I had a flexible metal spout made that has been in use now for several seasons, and it works very satisfactorily. It is made of a series of round galvanized iron pipes that overlap each other four inches and are fastened one to the other by means of a strap and a few links of small chain on each side of every section. The hose is engaged a ring that is riveted to the lower end of the section of pipe next above, etc."

"These sections of pipe are 28 inches long, 10 inches in diameter at the small end and 11 inches at the other end. Enough of these sections are made to reach from the end of the carrier to within four feet of the bottom of the silo. The two sections next to the carrier are made gradually larger than the others and of such shape as to accommodate themselves to the end of the carrier. By directing the nozzle of this spout the man in the silo is enabled to place the silage exactly where it is wanted, and, most important of all, the grain, leaves and stalks are distributed in the proper proportions."

He Bears No Grudge.

"Aren't you the man I gave one of my homemade pies to yesterday?"

"Yes, lady, but we won't quarrel. I'm willin' ter let bygones be bygones."

HEBRON.

Senior Class Ride.
The senior class at Hebron Academy went on their class ride to Poland Spring, Monday afternoon, in spite of the storm. Over 40 were in the party, including some of the teachers, Prof. Teague, Fogge and Lafriere, and the preceptress, Clara P. Morrill. The party left Hebron about 1:30 and arrived at Poland Spring at 3:30. The supper was served at 7:30 and was an elegant affair. The rest of the evening was spent playing games, dancing, etc. The storm was so severe that they decided to spend the night there, and at about eleven most of the party retired for the night. In the morning the roads were so badly drifted that the homeward journey was slow, and it was past noon before the last team arrived in Hebron.

Frank soon extricated the horse and cart, none the worse for the escapade.

The circle held by the gentlemen on Friday evening, was a great success in every way. There was the usual supper of baked beans and brownbread, after which the audience was entertained in a novel manner. The selections on the phonograph came first followed by music by the choir. Next Josie Ricker had her dog Kino perform the tricks that she had taught him. Last came W. H. Bailey's horse Black Beauty with Harvey Fitts on her back. She also went through with several tricks. The horse or dog have not appeared in public before, but did credit to their owners. The receipts of the evening were about $18.

BETHEL.

Cyrus M. Wornell.
Cyrus M. Wornell of Bethel was for many years deputy sheriff and sheriff of Oxford County. He died at his son's, Fred W. Wornell's at Woodfords, Sunday. For the past month he had fallen rapidly with what was supposed to be cancer of the stomach, and had recently been to the hospital for treatment. He had been sick about a year.

He was an efficient and experienced officer and successful in assisting in adjusting cases as well as preparing them for trial. He has been a prominent figure in Bethel for years and will be much missed. He was always interested in matters of public benefit and instrumental in furthering them.

Mr. Wornell was a member of the Oxford Lodge, No. 87, and also of the I. O. F. He enlisted, June 24, 1861, as Lieutenant of Company I, Fifth Maine Vol., with Col. C. S. Edwards as captain and James B. Walker as first lieutenant, but resigned Feb. 15, 1862.

He was a republican in politics and was always interested and active in party work. In religion he was a Universalist and was actively interested in the First Universalist church of Bethel, of which he was a member, and for many years and at the time of his death one of its trustees. After he had served the county as sheriff and deputy sheriff, Mr. Wornell was educated in the common schools of Peru, and in the Bethel High school.

He leaves a son, Fred W. Wornell and a daughter, Mrs. Helen S. Stone, the wife of W. F. Stone, the druggist. Mrs. Wornell died four years ago. Two brothers and a sister living in the West and a sister residing in Boston survive him.

The funeral took place from the home of Fred W. Wornell in Portland, Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 18th, at 2 p. m. The interment was in Portland by the side of his late wife who died about three years ago.

Rev. F. E. Barton, the Universalist pastor of Bethel officiated. There was a large attendance of neighbors, relatives and friends including many from Bethel, Mr. Wornell's home.

The pall bearers were representatives of the K. of P., Masonic and Odd Fellows lodges and the G. A. R. post of Bethel, with which Mr. Wornell was connected. The floral tributes were beautiful.

One Way of Making a Living.
There seems to be no limit to the variety of ways in which a dollar can be earned by a sharp witted man. I know one who makes a comfortable living by attending auction sales of furniture. He is not in collusion with the auctioneer. In fact, he will only attend such sales as are genuine and peremptory, where every article is sold for the highest figure bid, no matter how low. My friend simply trades on the weakness of human nature, especially of the feminine variety. Many women attend these sales and are really desirous of securing certain articles, but shrink from the publicity of trying to outbid some other would be purchaser.

They prefer to give $2 or $3 advance on the price paid by the successful bidder. This man secures all he can of the best bargains offered and then disposes of them at a small advance upon his outlay to one or other of the disappointed bidders. It is not unusual for him to clear from $10 to $20 a day. There is no loss, for even if the articles are left on his hands he gets his money back by sending them to a general auction room.—New York Telegram.

His Hat Wasn't on Straight.
Traffic was blocked on Fifth avenue. In both directions was strung out a long line of street cars and miscellaneous vehicles. The usual crowd had rushed to the point of disturbance, thus adding to the congestion.

A plain, ordinary, everyday kind of horse had stopped directly opposite one of the big stores, and despite all efforts to urge him on his way not a step would he move.

Some suggested a few firecrackers, others hinted at fire without crackers and still others vouchsafed that the fire department might prove effective, but the nag wouldn't move. The driver, who, it might be incidentally said, was an ashman, had a pretty fair sized club and knew how to wield it, too, but every time he administered a few punishing thuds the crowd yelled in disapproval, and still the horse stood on.

Members of the Chicago council of the National Association of Business Women are highly pleased at the result of the election of officers at the annual meeting of the association at Buffalo, Chicago having got the three highest offices—president, vice president and secretary.

the Association of Young Women's Clubs. She has the testing and graduating of all women finding employment through the exchange and is known to every employer of woman labor in Chicago.

The National Association of Business Women owes its present importance to the efforts of Mrs. Potter Palmer. It was formerly known as the National Association of Women Stenographers, but now includes all women engaged in business. The Chicago council numbers about 500 members, with councils at New York, Detroit, Denver and Minneapolis.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Minister Wu to the Women.

The wise and facetious Minister Wu Ting Fang made his appearance in a new role the other evening at a large gathering where both ladies and gentlemen were present, where he was the most conspicuous guest. He was asked to say a few words to the ladies in response to a toast to them. He said:

"When I see so many finely built women confronting me, and I am called upon to be the 'gallant' of the moment, what can I say but that I wish for that moment only I were not a Chinaman—I should like to be an American as I stand here, so that each one of you would appear as beautiful to me as you actually must be when seen through your countryman's eyes. Alas, the slight difference in the formation of our eyes cannot do justice to the impression you make upon me, individually and jointly and severally. But there are some well nourished figures and forms among you that really appear to be as fine as the best that my own fertile country has produced. And your intelligence and souls, I am told, which are hidden under your intricate fashionable apparel, are more beautiful even than your forms. May you all feel the depth and sincerity of my admiration, and may your youthful looks and honorable years always walk hand in hand."

A Baby Bottle Basket.

A convenient article which has been placed on the market this season is a baby bottle basket. It is really a portable traveling icebox consisting of a wicker basket 10 by 10 inches in size and having a leather strap passed around it under wicker loops, so that it may easily be carried. The basket is lined with felt to exclude the warm air. Inside is placed a galvanized icebox with a square inner compartment for the ice. There are bottle racks like the compartments of a castor in the ice box with openings for 12 six ounce sterilizing bottles. The middle compartment is to be used for holding the ice. The bottle racks are movable, so that the outside compartment may be used for stacking lunch at the same time that the ice is carried in the middle compartment. Or four eight ounce bottles of milk may be placed in the middle compartment and lunch packed in the outer compartment; this of course in weather cold enough so that there is no need of ice to cool the milk. When the icebox contains all the bottles it will hold, there are the 12 six ounce bottles and the four eight ounce bottles. This will supply a child for quite a long journey in cases where there is a cool place for the basket en route, and the main object is to carry as much of one kind of milk as possible.

His Hat Wasn't on Straight.

Traffic was blocked on Fifth avenue. In both directions was strung out a long line of street cars and miscellaneous vehicles. The usual crowd had rushed to the point of disturbance, thus adding to the congestion.

A plain, ordinary, everyday kind of horse had stopped directly opposite one of the big stores, and despite all efforts to urge him on his way not a step would he move.

Some suggested a few firecrackers, others hinted at fire without crackers and still others vouchsafed that the fire department might prove effective, but the nag wouldn't move. The driver, who, it might be incidentally said, was an ashman, had a pretty fair sized club and knew how to wield it, too, but every time he administered a few punishing thuds the crowd yelled in disapproval, and still the horse stood on.

A little woman who had made her way through the crowd now stepped into the arena. She walked to the horse's head and glanced around, taking in the situation. Then she smiled indulgently at the people and pointed to a mirror in a large show window. People began to understand. The little woman deftly straightened the horse's sunbonnet, and with a glad shake of his head he allowed progress to march onward.—Sunny South.

Nagging Before Guests.

"Visiting about, as I do every summer," remarked a popular woman, "I cannot help being struck by certain faults of manner and, I might almost say, breeding, which are common among the nicest people, who would be the first to detect and criticize such solecisms in others. One habit is talking with each other to make conversation at the table, instead of to the guest. This is very common, although one would not think it possible, and the people who do it would be greatly astonished if they thought I referred to them. It is generally done with the idea of amusing the visitor, no doubt, but it is always annoying."

"Another habit, which is much worse, is fault finding on the part of the mistress or master of the house. People should make it a rule never to blame a child or a servant or criticize each other's actions before a guest. A third person is always made uncomfortable by it, and feels almost as if he himself were included in the reprimand. But what is called 'nagging' between husband and wife is the worst of all. I know a couple who are otherwise perfectly charming and who are really fond of each other, but who are so continually squabbling and wrangling that I have stopped going there for no other reason. I simply cannot stand it—it is too depressing."—Chicago News.

California Pioneer Women.

If not the latest, the most unique in women's clubs is the California Women's Pioneer society. To be eligible to its membership a woman must have crossed the plains in an ox team before the year 1854. No less than 30 names adorn the charter roll. These early settlers in the then wild west not only talk to their hearts' content of the good but now includes all women engaged in business. The Chicago council numbers about 500 members, with councils at New York, Detroit, Denver and Minneapolis.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Modest Miss Reynolds.

Miss Minnie J. Reynolds of Colorado has done almost the entire work of the traveling library committee since its formation. During the first year it was in her charge as secretary of the committee (the chairman living at a distance from Denver), and during the past year as chairman Miss Reynolds made the motion in the federation meeting to start the traveling libraries and was responsible for the movement by which was secured the appropriation for the Denver district libraries. She was a member of the committee from the Woman's club which secured the first appropriation for the state library back in the early days of suffrage. It gives us pleasure to state these facts because nearly everything that has been written about this work in the Denver press Miss Reynolds has written herself. She has time and again given full credit to every one connected with the work, but has never mentioned her own connection with it.—Woman's Journal.

English Wedding Customs.

English brides have not discarded the tradition, as have the brides of this country, and still wear their veils over their face in going to the altar. One exceptional bride who did so proves the rule. Custom is disregarded in low cut wedding gowns or those with transparent yoke and sleeves, a fashion which is considered objectionable by many of the older matrons. The English bride, however, is appealing for more rigidity. There is a demand now for the evening wedding, which is more picturesque and satisfactory in many ways than the morning or afternoon wedding. The Church of England being the power in England, there has been the rigid observance of canonical hours, and the so called breakfast followed the ceremony, the bride and groom being supposed to have received the sacrament before and to have fasted until the

She Sampled the Grog.

The royal yacht Albert was once taking Queen Victoria for a cruise on the Solent. While the queen was sitting upon deck plaiting straw, then a fashionable occupation, she noticed that the sailors were gathering in groups and watching her furtively. Presently she saw them speak to Lord Adolphus Fitz-Clarence, the commander of the yacht, and she called him to her side.

"What is there in the air, my lord? I hope we are not going to have a mutiny."

Lord Adolphus answered her in the same hattering spirit. "No, ma'am. Your majesty can remove all cause of trouble by changing your seat."

"But why should I change my seat?"

"Well, your majesty, you are sitting directly at the door of the grog cupboard, and our poor fellows cannot get their drink."

"Oh, if that's the case I shall move at once, but on the condition that I get some of the grog for myself."

When her majesty had tasted some of the grog, she pronounced it "very good grog, but it would be better were it a little stronger."

Miss Lillian Martin, Graduate of Training School for Nurses, Brantford, Can., now of Milwaukee, Wis., Testifies that the Hospital Doctors Rely Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Cure Severe Cases of Woman's Ills. She says:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—While we are taught in the training schools throughout the country to look down upon patent medicines, and while the doctors in the hospitals speak slightly of them to patients, I have found that they really know different. I have frequently known physicians to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to women suffering with the most serious complications of ovarian troubles, falling of the womb, leucorrhoea, and other disorders. They would as a rule put the Compound in regular medicine bottles and label it 'Tonic,' or other names, but I knew it was your Compound, and have seen them fill it in prescription bottles. I have never seen anything but happy results from its use; inflammation and ulceration has been relieved and cured in a few weeks, especially where your Sanative Wash has been applied also. I feel it but due to you to give proper credit for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; I have great faith in it and often recommend it to others."—MISS LILLIAN MARTIN, 384 27th Ave., Milwaukee Wis.

Minard's Liniment Has Powerful Healing Properties.

Stops a Cough, Cures a Cold, Overcomes Pain Instantly.

We know of no liniment but Minard's that is not made with oil or grease, or some other ingredient that is not pleasant to handle. Take any one of them but Minard's and the base is oil, which is supposed to reach the seat of inflammation by an external application. Some oils penetrate, while others could be rubbed all day without going through the pores of the skin. Minard's Liniment is different from anything ever prepared for the purpose of allaying pain. It will soak through the skin in a few seconds, and find its way direct to the seat of the trouble. It is not a concoction simply to rub on your legs, or your arms or back, but is as much an internal as an outward remedy. There was never anything made to compare with it for instantaneous action in croup, convulsions, colds, pneumonia, diphtheria, and grippe. It acts like magic, and has saved the lives of more children than anything ever made. Thousands of homes keep it for this purpose alone, but it is an ever-ready, never-failing friend for dozens of other ailments.

"We use Minard's Liniment, and have for several years. I used it with great success this winter for grippe, by taking it internally with molasses, and wetting a flannel and keeping it on my chest. It broke it up in a very short time."—MRS. EMMA JONES, 255 West St., Rutland, Vt.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO., Boston, Mass.
Dear Sir,—In reference to your letter, I will gladly answer that I received a liniment that would do so much good for a cold or lameness. I was choked up so with a cold which lay on my lungs that I could hardly breathe. After I applied it the first time it relieved me of the pain, and I rubbed it on thoroughly three times after that; that was the end of my cold. I have told my friends to buy a bottle and try it. I will gladly recommend it to any one.

Yours truly,
R. F. D., No. 1.
Try it yourself. It costs but twenty-five cents a bottle. You can get it at any druggist's.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

NEWSBOYS' CHARITY.

They "Chip In" to Aid the Mother of Benny, Who Was Killed by a Car.
Wet to the skin, a group of boys trooped into The Herald office. They didn't mind the drenching rain, for they are used to it; moreover, their mission was one which no storm might hinder.

They were the newsboys of Herald square, the friends of little Benny Levine, whose life was cut short by a Broadway car as he ran to a customer who wanted a paper. They knew of the woe of Benny's mother; they were aware that she could ill afford to bear the expenses of his funeral. With a generous impulse they had decided to give of their little that she might be enabled to keep her home, a difficult task now that she has been deprived of her mainstay. Hard as is their life, accustomed more to hard knocks than to caresses, their sturdy young hearts throbbed with kindness. Their undertaking was an object lesson to their elders.

Hardly had kindly hands lifted the wounded boy into the ambulance before his shocked companions, having heard him gasp the one word, "Mamma," determined they must do something for Mrs. Levine. When they learned that he had died in Roosevelt hospital, they knew it was the time "to do a good turn," and soon they had picked out six of their number as "fellows to collect." They took a cigar box, nailed down the lid in which a slit had been cut, and this was passed around, each one of the many dropping into the box pennies for which they had risked their lives even as Benny had.

When night had come, they kept up the work. All day as much attention was paid to the cigar box as to the selling of papers, and then, having the contributions counted, they found that the total was $3.80. This they intrusted

A HERALD SQUARE NEWSBOY, to The Herald, that they might be assured it would safely get to Mrs. Levine.

Never did the lads work as they did the following morning. Their enthusiasm was unbounded, for they felt that the bigger their sales the more they could afford to contribute to the fund. With noon their workday ended, and the committee on finance, figuring up the pennies which had found their way into the box, had 75 cents more to swell the little fund. So when they walked into The Herald office all unmindful of their dripping clothing they were happy as Louis Schwartz, their leader, handed over three shining silver quarters.

"We'll keep it up," said Louis, "till we see that poor Benny's had his rights. We are going to send a letter to President Vreeland of the railroad company asking him to see that the company treats Benny's mother square. She can't do nothing now, for she is so afraid that she won't let Benny's brother Nathan sell any more papers."

Three of Benny's nine years had been spent selling papers in Herald square. He was a manly little fellow, and his chief care was to keep his younger brother out of harm's way. He was not at all quarrelsome, and many of the lads who were his keenest rivals in selling papers are foremost in collecting the fund for his mother.—New York Herald.

The Boy King.

On May 17 next Alfonso XIII will attain his majority, which in Spain is 16 years, and his mother, Maria Christina, will surrender to him the authority that she has exercised during his boyhood.

A recent picture of Alfonso shows a delicate, serious and intelligent face. It suggests a boy that has not had his proper share of outdoor pleasures and upon whom the responsibilities of life have fallen prematurely. The impression made by the picture is confirmed by what is known of his life. He is physically frail, and his time has been spent mainly with his mother and his tutors, although he has had some military instruction.

REGULATES HABITS.

are our hope; in them rests the fate of the affairs of the next generation. That they may meet these duties well-equipped requires perfect health as much or more than technical education.

We older ones are responsible for their health; negligence in one small trifling ailment may leave a weakness to be felt twenty years hence. The situation demands that we watch our children carefully.

See that unfailing regularity is established in their personal habits; that the stomach-ache, the head-ache, the impure blood as evidenced by skin eruptions is looked after carefully. Don't wreck the whole nervous system; don't relieve aches and pains with powerful mineral drugs.

TONIKO-TEA is essentially a children's medicine. They like it because it isn't bad to take; it's the best medicine for them because of its simplicity and action

SOUTH WATERFORD.

Fatal Accident.
While working in the woods near his home, on Saturday, John Abbott was fatally injured by a falling branch and died at his home on Sunday at 1 p. m.

Mr. Abbott had been at work with other men during the morning but these left him about 12.30 to go to dinner while he kept at work. Shortly after, it is thought, he cut a limb about twenty inches in diameter which fell, striking him on the head and crushing his skull.

He retained the use of his faculties long enough to put his axe in the team nearby and partly out on his fur coat but then fell unconscious.

His wife becoming anxious at his long absence started about 7.30 p. m. to look for him. She found him on the ground where he had fallen, in an unconscious condition with his skull badly fractured and his foot injured with several toes severed from the foot. He was at once taken to his home, a physician summoned and everything possible was done for him but he did not recover consciousness and passed away about 1 p. m., Sunday afternoon.

Percy Bailey and wife of Harrison say they shall get mad soon and start for the West soon. If the Arizona country respondent don't leave off starting them, as it has informed its readers once or twice that they were to leave at such a time, but so far they have never had any idea of going.

Your correspondent of last week got things somewhat mixed in stating that there would be an all day's Grange meeting on Saturday, the 15th, and dance in the evening, as there was no intention of a meeting or dance at that time. There will be an all day's session on March 8th, and at that time the brothers are to furnish the dinner for the crowd. It is hoped as many of the members will be present as possible.

BUCKFIELD.

In the kindness of the Club.

Wednesday evening, Feb. 13th, the Buckfield Literary Club tendered a reception to the Nesinset History Club and the Young Ladies' Club, the club women inviting their husbands and the young ladies their escorts.

The program consisted of vocal and instrumental music and other features more humorous than otherwise. The hall was tastefully decorated with bunting, flags, etc. A fine treat was served with lemonade served from a "punch bowl." We could not detect the old-time "stick" as a favoring.

Some of the club women, in view of the many entertainments they have tendered their husbands and their apparent lack of appreciation, were favored, declare that all entertainments hereafter will be enjoyed solely by the ladies.

Presto! Now the men have organized, chosen committees and are going ahead to do the honors to the clubs.
